Ferguson,2018-09-10 Excerpt from The Timber Resources of West Virginia This is a report on the latest forest resurvey of West Virginia made by the Northeastern Forest Experiment Station It supersedes a report published in 1952 which contained forest resource data based on an earlier survey made by the Northeastern Station In this resurvey a scientifically designed sampling system partly based upon remeasured plots was used Data were collected and analyzed by the forest survey staff of the Northeastern Forest Experiment Station except for the area of the Monongahela National Forest in which the resurvey field work was done by National Forest personnel Users of the data in this report are cautioned to read with care the definitions of the terms used the description of the forest survey methods and the statements pertaining to the reliability of the estimates About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works 13 Years of Forestry Research in West Virginia George R. Trimble (Jr.),Burley D. Fridley,1963 S2The Fernow Experimental Forest a 3 640 acre tract on the Monongahela National Forest was set aside for the use of this research unit as an outdoor laboratory for studies in managing mountainous forest land The forest stands here are mixtures of old growth and second growth hardwoods dating from around 1905 when heavy cuttings were made In topography history of cutting climate and variety of species the Fernow Forest is representative of much of the timberland in West Virginia and adjacent states Though the Fernow Forest has been the main locale of the research program other studies have been made in other parts of West Virginia in western Maryland and in southwestern Pennsylvania A number of study areas are located on the Monongahela National Forest And in 1957 an agreement was made to cooperate in forest research with the Union Carbide Olefins Company on their land near Charleston West Virginia Studies are now under way there on a 2 500 acre area known as the Blue Creek Experimental Forest The program of research at Elkins is concerned primarily with multiple use of forest land It stresses integrated management studies aimed toward finding practical solutions to problems of managing the timber water and game resources of this area Results from these studies should provide bases for judging compatibility of uses and determining use priorities The pages to follow present an overall view of the Elkins research program and highlight the more significant results S3
