need to find efficient teaching methods Debates have hinged mainly around the alleged advantages of communicative vs traditional methods However most approaches have their roots in linguistic and psychological theories that have been questioned by language researchers Some language teachers are probably unaware of these advances and to that extent continue to adhere to teaching approaches mainly based on intuitions Consequently evaluating materials may be often performed in rather uninformed circumstances The book contains chapters on relevant issues by leading researchers classified into three main areas The editors contribute a chapter to each of these sections about the implications for second language teaching This book facilitates an approximation between researchers in the theoretical and experimental fields of language and those responsible for innovation in language teaching It is designed so that L2 teachers can adopt and adjust the knowledge drawn from the book to their particular environment and group of students

Teaching Global History Alan J. Singer, 2012-04-27 Teaching Global History challenges prospective and beginning social studies teachers to formulate their own views about what is important to know in global history and why It explains how to organize the curriculum around broad social studies concepts and themes and student questions about humanity history and the contemporary world All chapters include lesson ideas a sample lesson plan with activity sheets primary source documents and helpful charts graphs photographs and maps High school students responses are woven in throughout Additional material corresponding to each chapter is posted online at http://people.hofstra.edu/alan_j_singer The traditional curriculum tends to highlight the Western heritage and to race through epochs and regions leaving little time for an in depth exploration of concepts and historical themes for the evaluation of primary and secondary sources and for students to draw their own historical conclusions Offering an alternative to such pre packaged textbook outlines and materials this text is a powerful resource for promoting thoughtful reflection and debate about what the global history curriculum should be and how to teach it

Global Fragments Anke Bartels, Dirk Wiemann, 2007 While the world seems to be getting ever smaller and globalization has become the ubiquitous buzz word regionalism and fragmentation also abound This might be due to the fact that far from being the alleged production of cultural homogeneity the global is constantly re defined and altered through the local This tension pervading much of contemporary culture has an obvious special relevance for the new varieties of English and the literature published in English world wide Postcolonial literatures exist at the interface of English as a hegemonic medium and its many national regional and local competitors that transform it in the new English literatures Thus any exploration of a globalization of cultures has to take into account the fact that culture is a complex field characterized by hybridization plurality and difference But while global or transnational cultures may allow for a new cosmopolitanism that produces ever changing fluid identities they do not give rise to an egalitarian global village an asymmetry between centre and periphery remains largely intact albeit along new parameters The essays collected in this volume offer readings of literary theoretical and filmic texts from the postcolonial world These texts are read as attempts to articulate the global with the local from a perspective of immersion in the actual diversity of life worlds focusing on such issues as consumption identity politics and modes of affiliation In this sense they are global fragments locally refracted figurations of an experience of world wide interconnectedness

Global Fissures Clara A.B. Joseph, 2006-01-01 The essays in this volume examine the tensions between two major political and intellectual structures the global and the postcolonial charting the ways in which such tensions are constitutive of changing power relations between the individual the nation state and global forces Contributors ask how postcolonialism with its emphasis on cultural difference and diversity can respond to the new neo imperialist imperatives of globalization Signalling the discursive grounds for debate is the fissures fusions title suggesting alternative categorizations of stereotypes like global homogenization and postcolonial resistance Interwoven are considerations of the intellectual or writer's position today Literary texts from a wide range of countries are analysed for their resistance to global hegemony and for representations of manipulative power structures in order to highlight issues such as environmental loss nationality migrancy and marginality Specific topics covered include westernizing the Indian academy ecotourism and the new media of computer technology the corporatization of creativity in re branding New Zealand including film and the hybrid forms of Latin American photography Writers discussed include Chinua Achebe Samuel Beckett Hafid Bouazza Bei Dao Mahmoud Darwish Witi Ihimaera James Joyce Yann Martel Rohinton Mistry Ellen Ombre Michael Ondaatje George Orwell

Arundhati Roy Salman Rushdie and Edward Said Different essays stress the hegemony of global networks the technological revolution s revitalizing of niche marketing while marginalizing postcolonial resistance the implications of the internationalization of culture for the indigene and the potential of cultural hybridity to collapse cultural hierarchies
