

Business Structure : Physical Structure Study Model

This conceptual model helps understand how physical structure affects business performance. It shows a cycle where business structure (like layout, technology, equipment) influences performance. Performance is defined as meeting customer needs while keeping costs low. The cycle is broken down into three parts: Physical Structure, Business Structure, and Performance. The Physical Structure part is further divided into Layout, Equipment, and Technology. The Business Structure part is divided into Process and People. The Performance part is divided into Cost and Quality.

Physical Structure

Physical structure refers to the physical layout of a business, including the arrangement of equipment, technology, and people.

1. Physical structure affects business performance by influencing the flow of materials and information.
2. Physical structure affects business performance by influencing the cost of production.
3. Physical structure affects business performance by influencing the quality of production.
4. Physical structure affects business performance by influencing the speed of production.
5. Physical structure affects business performance by influencing the flexibility of production.
6. Physical structure affects business performance by influencing the safety of production.
7. Physical structure affects business performance by influencing the environmental impact of production.

Business Structure

Business structure refers to the way a business is organized, including the hierarchy of the organization, the division of labor, and the flow of information. It is influenced by the physical structure and the performance of the business.

The physical structure of a business affects its business structure. For example, a business with a centralized physical structure (like a factory) will have a centralized business structure. A business with a decentralized physical structure (like a retail store) will have a decentralized business structure.

Physical Structure/Technology Model

1. Physical structure and technology are interrelated and influence each other.
2. Physical structure affects technology by influencing the cost of production.
3. Technology affects physical structure by influencing the speed of production.
