

Student decision-making study

16 pages | 3910 words

Introduction

Every graduating high school students are challenged with the problem of having to decide on future career paths. Throughout certain points in the school year, it is not surprising to see masses of them trooping to various university campuses for the purpose of taking their entrance exams. After all, that is a major step in being able to attend the college of their choice. The most difficult decisions for them to make are the choice of college institutions to attend, and also what course program to take. For students who see themselves attending in a university, the assessment process perhaps undertakes high priority especially nowadays that the higher education has transformed in many ways. Choosing a course carefully is an important aspect which will give conclusion to a student's academic endeavor.

Recently, the Department of Education (DepEd) implemented career guidance for high school students in public secondary schools nationwide to help them get ready for higher education after graduation. Using this study, the researchers aims to determine how helpful the career pathing and guidance programs for students in deciding on course program they would take.

The researchers have decided to make a study about the factors that graduating high school students consider in choosing a career. We will be providing information that will cover various factors such as: having better job opportunities, pursuing your passion, etc. We believe that this research will help students and parents alike in choosing a course. Also, the researchers would like to present it to colleges and universities in order for them to promote their education based on the preferences of high school graduates.

Background of the Study

Many of the youth today are confused and uncertain as to what path they should follow after their high school days. During the 1960's and even today, people who graduated college found more job opportunities available to them than those who had a lower form of education. We believe that students who graduate college with the course suited for them will even have a higher percentage of getting a job.

Almost all high school graduates go through a hard time in trying to single out a course that will be an influential factor of what they will be in the near future. Due to the number of courses today, graduating high school students may find themselves in a difficult situation. We understand how important it is to pick the right course since different people have a different set of skills.

This research provides further analysis on influential factors that the students consider in deciding what course to take. For this purpose, the researchers worked on a study to understand high school students' choices by selecting the graduating students of Immaculate Conception Academy – West Campus to see the insights and perception of students coming from a private sector.

Theoretical Framework

Many studies on student decision-making use economic and sociologic theoretical frameworks to examine factors of college choice. These frameworks have been used to develop three theoretical, conceptual...
