Personality assessment is one of the essential procedures that befit the analysis of personal capacities that could be channeled toward the performance and competencies of the workforce in the business. Notably, personality assessment inventories enhance reflection and regrouping of strategies that aim to guarantee discreet performances among the workforce at both the individual and group levels. This paper portrays an in-depth analysis and discussion of Keirsey Temperament Sorter and Myers-Briggs Type Indicator as the core personality assessment inventories when it comes to hiring decisions to source a qualified all-round assortment of employees that can help in achieving and sustaining organizational goals.
