

Several school systems in the United States and in other countries are using a year-round school schedule. Instead of one long summer vacation and short winter and spring vacations, ~~the~~ children go to school year-round with two-to three-week breaks throughout the year. I do not think our school system should adopt this schedule.

The biggest argument against year-round school is the elevated cost. It is hot here in the summer. If we were in school then, the county would have to pay to have the school air-conditioned. Transportation costs, would also go up. The staff would need to be paid more. After all, no one really wants to be at school in the summer. Students pay as well, though not in money. They are giving up time with their families—for many, summer is the only time their parents don't have to go to work everyday—to sit in a classroom.

When kids think "summer," they automatically think of the beach, pool parties, playing outside, or just relaxing with a good book. But now the tyrannical school board wants to take that away from them by instituting a year-round school schedule. What these people don't realize is that school is not the most important thing in a child's life. Many kids go to camp or get jobs during the summer. These activities help them build responsibility, leadership, and new friendships. These traits are far more valuable in life than ~~a~~ doing math problems out of a textbook.

Proponents of year-round school argue that, without a two-month summer break, students don't forget everything they learned. They have a nice two-
