Globalization in modern world Example

After the end of World War II, much of Europe was in ruins. With millions of people dead due to war and starvation and most European economies decimated, the United States decided to jumpstart the process of rebuilding Europe by providing financial aid to the countries of Western Europe. Within a few years, America departed from its isolationist foreign policy and became deeply involved in foreign affairs. Through economic assistance, many European countries were able to recover. The European economy flourished throughout the following decades. Today, the rebuilding of Europe is considered one of the greatest foreign policy achievements in American history. Europe's reconstruction resulted in widespread globalization. World economies became connected at an unprecedented level. International trade skyrocketed. Globalization also led to rapid technological advancement. The interconnectedness of Western cultures allowed ideas to be spread across the world in a matter of days. America became an important trading partner with many of the countries that it had been at war with a few decades earlier. The process of globalization in the late 20th century gave citizens of the world a glimpse of the future: a global economy driven by innovation and fierce competition. Today, many countries are competing to become the most dominant country in the world economy. Borders have become increasingly less important as countries can no longer isolate themselves from the rest of the world and expect to be able to compete at an international level. Many countries have also substantially reduced trade restrictions in an attempt to sell more products overseas. Companies no longer seek to become dominant on a domestic level. Major corporations such as Apple and Amazon seek to spread their dominance by building offices around the world in an attempt to tap into every world economy. They do this not only to sell their products in every corner of the map, but also to withdraw valuable resources from these countries such as new technologies and even their own workforce. American companies no longer employ only American workers, but now draw their talent from countries across the world in an attempt to have the most skilled workforce. This creates competition for workers as they now have to compete for jobs in a global market. In the modern-day economy, intense competition exists on the macro and micro level. While countries spend millions on education and subsidies to produce the most highly educated workers and technological innovation, young adults have to be able to adapt and evolve with the constantly changing global economy. Today, we live in an international world. Nations and corporations are defined by their ability to command a global market. In the modern world, attaining a degree in international studies is important regardless of the career path one wants to pursue. To be prepared to compete in the global market that dominates today's economies, I will have to understand why decisions are made at a global level. An international studies degree will prepare me for the global competition that awaits me in the job market by giving me a deep understanding of foreign cultures. Learning about and understanding other cultures is necessary to break down the barriers that divide our world. In a world where transparency between nations is critical, I must be able to understand what separates and unites countries and cultures. I would like to study German, in particular

Papers On Globalization:

Globalization in Historical Perspective Michael D. Bordo, Alan M. Taylor, Jeffrey G. Williamson, 2007-11-01 As awareness of the process of globalization grows and the study of its effects becomes increasingly important to governments and businesses as well as to a sizable opposition the need for historical understanding also increases Despite the importance of the topic few attempts have been made to present a long term economic analysis of the phenomenon one that frames the issue by examining its place in the long history of international integration This volume collects eleven papers doing exactly that and more The first group of essays explores how the process of globalization can be measured in terms of the long term integration of different markets from the markets for goods and commodities to those for labor and capital and from the sixteenth century to the present The second set of contributions places this knowledge in a wider context examining some of the trends and questions that have emerged as markets converge and diverge the roles of technology and geography are both considered along with the controversial issues of globalization's effects on inequality and social justice and the roles of political institutions in responding to them The final group of essays addresses the international financial systems that play such a large part in guiding the process of globalization considering the influence of exchange rate regimes financial development financial crises and the architecture of the international financial system itself This volume reveals a much larger picture of the process of globalization one that stretches from the establishment of a global economic system during the nineteenth century through the disruptions of two world wars and the Great Depression into the present day The keen analysis insight and wisdom in this volume will have something to offer a wide range of readers interested in this important issue IMF Staff Papers, Volume 56, No. 1 International Monetary Fund. performed by means of EViews and MS Excel software. In the issue of the research, globalization indicators influencing economic growth in Ukraine are developed. They include openness of Ukrainian economy to trade in goods and services, general and according to its structure, openness to financial globalization, FDI and portfolio investment flows, external debt and international reserves as a share of GDP, growth rates of world and Russian GDP, world price indexes on oil and metals, index of economic freedom of Ukraine. The impact of these indicators on economic growth is defined and mathematically proven. Of all abovementioned indicators, the following proved to be statistically significant: openness to trade in ferrous and non ferrous metals, machinery, services, growth rates of Russian GDP and world oil price index. These results show that main orientations of foreign economic policy of our country should be differentiation of foreign trade structure, development of market institutions, improvement of FDI attracting schemes, development of equity market and severe restriction of shadow economy.

Despite the controversial nature of globalization, there is no doubt that the pace and intensity of global interactions has been multiplied exponentially over the last few decades. Criticism of globalization is generally arranged into three camps: political, economic and cultural. Political critics point to the status of the small state and conclude either that it is in retreat or that the state has reconstituted itself to confront the challenges posed by globalization, thereby transforming itself into a competition state. Economic critics hold that globalization is nothing new; that international transactions are in the logic of capitalism and that the trade along the silk route goes back centuries. Cultural critics protest that globalization is taking us headlong into the homogenization of the world. Others warn of new fault lines that would lead to a clash of civilizations and international conflicts along those lines Others lament that cultural globalization will end with the Americanization of the world This collection of essays like the debates themselves is divided into three parts The first section focuses on the political aspects of globalization In one essay Globalization and the Caribbean the essayist argues that internationalization leaves no room for small countries in the Caribbean The essays in the second section are devoted to an economic inquiry into the process and impact of globalization In Inequality and the Division of Gains at the Global Level one essayist notes that the logic of economic theory is being overwhelmed by the interests of the powerful and that the concerns of the poor countries are important only to the point where they begin to impact the well being of the rich The final section explores the issue of cultural and social integration

The Unspoken Truth about Globalization Peter Temu,2007 Globalization is a subject we have heard and read so much about Here is the first of a series of monographs designed to unmask the truth behind globalization Eventually The UNSPOKEN TRUTH series of booklets will cover a wide array of topics which like globalization have far reaching policy implications You will find within these pages solid information and stimulating ideas on the whole subject of globalization Starting with a meaningful normative idea of globalizing development the author shows the close interrelationship between globalization and liberalization how the law of intellectual property is inimical to good globalization and how globalization left unchecked can undermine the sovereignty of national governments The book challenges the multilateral organizations such as the World Bank the International Monetary Fund and the World Trade Organization to stop advocating globalization policies that benefit the developed countries at the expense of the developing countries In particular it calls on the United States as the monolithic superpower that is uniquely placed to assume world leadership to rise above selfish national interests and confront the challenge of spearheading global equity The book suggests however that the United Nations for all its shortcomings is still the body best placed to engineer balanced globalization on a world scale provided it is reformed in a way that enhances significantly both its power and its international prestige

A critical analysis of the following statement

"Globalisation is not important as in reality most international firms operate on regional or local basis" Marlene Dietenbacher-Kuhn,2012-04-13 Essay from the year 2010 in the subject Economics International Economic Relations La Trobe University Melbourne language English abstract Executive Summary Considering the given statement we have to consider if it is true that globalization is not important then why should we look at globalization The statement includes truth since actually most of them seem to operate in a region but is this really the sole answer First of all one statement has to be made to clarify the issue globalization is important as it is a trend that is characterized by denationalization in which national boundaries are becoming less relevant But on the other hand there is not such a thing as a global strategy that never has to be adapted to several or even all of the markets MNCs operate in That is why in this essay the argument is put forward that globalization is not vitally important to international firms The essay concludes that globalization for international firms is important but that there is still the urgent need to redefine their global strategy as they have to differ from country to country and adapt to local needs and practices

Globalization and Poverty Ann Harrison,2007-11-01 Over the past two decades the percentage of the world s population living on less than a dollar a day has been cut in half How much of that improvement is because of or in spite of globalization While anti globalization activists mount loud critiques and the media report breathlessly on globalization s perils and promises economists have largely remained silent in part because of an entrenched institutional divide between those who study poverty and those who study trade and finance Globalization and Poverty bridges that gap bringing together experts on both international trade and poverty to provide a detailed view of the effects of globalization on the poor in developing nations answering such questions as Do lower import tariffs improve the lives of the poor Has increased financial integration led to more or less poverty How have the poor fared during various currency crises Does food aid hurt or help the poor Poverty the contributors show here has been used as a popular and convenient catchphrase by parties on both sides of the globalization debate to further their respective arguments Globalization and Poverty provides the more nuanced understanding necessary to move that debate beyond the slogans
