

Generally, the authoritative nature of my mom impacted me positively. I realized the importance of doing the right thing and the consequences of doing the wrong things. Moreover, the parenting style boosted my self-esteem because, to date, I feel good whenever I accomplish something. I learned that there are rules that need to be followed for one to succeed in life. This parenting type impacted my academic and social life. I ended up getting excellent grades and many friends through interactions and socializations. Authoritative parenting style does not instill a sense of independence while the permissive parenting style equips one with a knowledge of freedom (Martinez et al., 2019). Having experienced both parenting styles, I believe I was brought up properly. This is because what authoritative parenting lacked, permissive parenting had and vice versa. Today, I am the right person, all thanks to my parents, who brought me up in the best possible manner.

New Directions and Trends in Parenting Research Nicolette Vanessa Roman, Yosi Yaffe, Dorit Alt, 2024-08-28 For many decades parenting has been at the center of interest for practitioners and researchers interested in child social and psychological development The body of research on children s socialization has primarily focused on traditional parenting styles and their related practices in the spirit of Baumrind s and others conceptualization of parental control and power assertion e g authoritative authoritarian and permissive This research has revealed many domains of children s and adolescents adjustment and wellbeing that are affected by and affecting parenting quality but intriguing new parental approaches and types have recently emerged in research literature such as digital parenting transcendent parenting parental alienation overparenting helicopter parenting tiger parenting and several others about which more is yet to be learned Likewise in recent years our understanding of the role played by factors such as culture ethnicity environmental and familial background in the relationship between parenting styles and children s psychological wellbeing and mental health has greatly improved However the question of whether or not there is a global uniform optimal parenting remains controversial as more studies are required to better understand the varying impacts of parenting on the child s well being within different demographic and familial contexts This is especially true for families with special needs children i e children and adolescents with developmental and psychological disabilities where research on parenting styles in particular is understudied Additionally in the present digital era there is growing interest in relatively new behavioral outcomes in children and adolescents such as sedentary behaviors including eating and nutrition habits online behaviors and digital activity vs physical activity These and other important contemporary aspects in children s functioning and behaviors contribute to developmental mental health and further establishing our knowledge regarding the parental role in these contexts is essential
