India's Rise C. Fred Bergsten, 2015-09-17 A new study by C Fred Bergsten shows that India could increase its exports by 500 billion per year by joining the next stage of the Trans Pacific Partnership TPP trade agreement Bergsten argues trade liberalization would enable India to increase its annual economic growth to 8 to 10 percent as targeted by the government of Prime Minister Narendra Modi Millions of new jobs would be created as a result and poverty would be substantially further reduced By contrast India will lose as much as 50 billion of current exports because of increasing discrimination against it by other countries if it remains outside the new global trade network This network includes the plurilateral agreements on international services environmental goods and government procurement now being negotiated in and around the World Trade Organization as well as the TPP and other megaregional arrangements To be accepted into these agreements India will have to implement the economic reform program proposed by the Modi government It will also have to liberalize its own markets to international trade and investment in order to persuade other countries to open their markets to its exports To join the TPP or a Free Trade Area of the Asia Pacific as proposed by China that might succeed it India will probably first have to join the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation APEC forum within the next couple of years President Barack Obama has welcomed India's interest in APEC and if India adopts the needed policy changes should strongly support Indian membership
