Four basic and often conflicting development strategies exist in nations with the resources:

1. The poor should raise productivity, attract more foreign investment and improve infrastructure. Many believed it had been demonstrated that a developing nation with infrastructure is successful.	2. In strategy, the national capability can arise from itself. China has made considerable progress since 1978. But, agriculture and industry is struggling. It is struggling to find the right balance between foreign investment and increasing the local fund.
3. Poorer countries should focus on basic infrastructure provision. Developing nations need infrastructure, particularly power and water provision.	4. The LDC has a natural resource. Developing nations should be wealthy.
5. The LDC has a high, low, or no identifiable resource. Developing nations have various natural resources, minerals, land, high unemployment, etc. It is hard to find a way to use these resources in a profitable way.	6. A high unemployment rate is a high unemployment rate. Developing nations have a high unemployment rate, and a high unemployment rate.
7. It is important to have a high unemployment rate. Developing nations have a high unemployment rate, and a high unemployment rate.	8. In strategy, the national capability can arise from itself. Developing nations have a high unemployment rate, and a high unemployment rate.
9.
