

CRIMINOLOGY

- according to Edwin H. Sutherland, "Criminology is the entire body of knowledge regarding crime as a social phenomenon. It includes within its scope the process of making of laws, of breaking of laws, and the society's reaction towards the breaking of laws."

- Criminology is a body of knowledge regarding crimes, criminals and the efforts of society to prevent and repress them.

- the scientific study of the causes of crime in relation to man and society who set and define rules and regulations for himself and others to govern.

Origin of the word "Criminology"

Etymologically, the term criminology came from the Latin word "crimen" meaning crime and Greek word "Logos" which means "to study". In 1885, Rafael Garofalo, an Italian Law Professor coined the term criminologia. In 1889, Paul Topinard, French Anthropologist, used the term criminology in French criminologie for the first time.

Principal Divisions of Criminology

1. Etiology of Crimes - the scientific analysis of the causes of crimes and the criminal behavior.
2. Sociology of Law - refers to the investigation of the nature of criminal law and its administration
3. Penology - the study of the control of crimes and the rehabilitation of offender.

Is criminology a science?

According to George Wilker, criminology cannot become a science because it has not yet acquired universal validity. Edwin H. Sutherland, the Dean of Modern Criminology, hoped that it will become a science in the future since the causes of crimes are almost the same which may be biological, environmental or combination of the two.

Nature of Criminology

1. It is applied science because criminology as a body of knowledge has already established universally accepted principles and concepts and these are used by other field of study. (INSTRUMENTATION)
2. It is a social science because it studies crime as a social phenomenon. Crime is a social problem which has a great impact to society.
3. It is dynamic because the concepts of criminology and their applications adapt to the changing time.
4. It is nationalistic because the study of criminology takes into consideration the history, the culture and the social norms and the laws of the country. Each country has its own set of laws and crimes are defined by the laws of the country.

Scope in the Study of Criminology

1. Study of the origin and development of criminal law
2. Study of the causes of crimes and development of criminals
3. Study of the other sciences that examine criminal behavior using scientific methods such as:

criminal demography - the study of the relationship between criminality and population.

criminal epidemiology - the study of the relationship between environment and criminality.

criminal ecology - the study of criminality in relation to the spatial distribution in a community.

criminal physical anthropology - the study of criminality in relation to physical constitution of men.

criminal psychology - the study of human behavior in relation to criminality.

criminal psychiatry - the study of human mind in relation to criminality.

victimology - the study of the role of the victim in the commission of a crime.
