Human Rights, Health, and Poverty Reduction Strategies World Health Organization, 2008. The task of addressing poverty, health, and human rights cannot be handled by any single global institution and requires rigorous interdisciplinary and coordinated action. This is why the WHO and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) have worked together with a range of stakeholders to develop this guide. It is intended as a tool for health policymakers to design, implement, and monitor a poverty reduction strategy through a human rights-based approach. It contains practical guidance and suggestions as well as good practice examples from around the world.

The Economics of Poverty, Inequality and Wealth Accumulation in Mexico M. Székely, 1998-09-21. The aim of this book is to understand why, despite a considerable increase in average income in Mexico during the 1984-1992 period of economic liberalization, the conditions of the poorest of the poor deteriorated and income inequality increased. To explain why some individuals were able to take advantage of the opportunities which the economy was generating while others were prevented from doing so, the author suggests some methodology to extract additional information from poverty and inequality measures and test the main theories of household saving behaviour.

Through a Lens of Scarcity Hanna Luetke Lanfer, 2021-09-09. The conditions for strategic health communication campaigns as a public health tool are examined for low-income contexts. The theoretical framework drafts a socioecological model with an extension of poverty influences to bring into focus the dynamics of a resource-poor environment and its impact on health-related behaviours and health campaigns. The research design includes two studies conducted in Sierra Leone. Study 1 triangulated three qualitative methods to explore past and current health communication practice in Sierra Leone. Study 2 is a mixed methods field experiment on handwashing which explored the effects of different campaign strategies. Results show that a community-based participatory approach with the inclusion of local leaders as health messengers was associated with higher chances of behaviour change than a non-treated setting. Further pathways for context-sensitive approaches for deprived audiences are suggested.

Immersion: learning about poverty face-to-face, 2007. Captures the diversity of immersion opportunities for development professionals spending a period of time living with and learning from a poor family. Poverty-conscious Restructuring of Public Expenditure Marco A. Ferroni, S. M. Ravi Kanbur, 1990 This paper looks at the pattern of public expenditure in Africa during the adjustment decade paying particular attention to the social sectors It concludes that the poverty focus and the poverty reduction impact of public spending in Africa is very low The reasons for this include a lack of funds for nonwage recurrent expenditures in core economic and social services inadequate intrasectoral resource allocation from a poverty reduction point of view and public expenditure management inefficiencies Absolute levels of expenditure on essential services are low in sub Saharan Africa compared with richer countries It is therefore concluded that increases in financial resources to support anti poverty programs are needed in Africa But raising the poverty focus of governmental expenditures also requires changes in the public spending as well as improvements in the factors which hamper the effectiveness of program delivery
