Exceptional Student Education Field Observations

I started and finished my field observations at Shenandoah Elementary School. This was genuinely a wonderful experience and I really enjoyed my time there. Being in a diversity class and knowing that I was going to visit children with learning and mental disabilities, I was nervous and a little apprehensive. I had the privilege of meeting so many great teachers, students, and staff and somewhat create a bond with each of them. The children were amazing, and through this experience, I know that this is exactly what I want to do with my future. Before my observations, I thought I wanted to be a kindergarten teacher, and it turns out that first grade is a better option for me. After observing, and seeing the giftedness of the students reassures me that this is what I want to do with my future. This was the best experience any aspiring teacher could wish to participate in, and I'm so grateful.

I visited an ESE classroom, which means Exceptional Student Education. This classroom is a VE (varying exceptionalities) resource classroom. The VE means that the students have varying needs or labels from SLD (specific learning disabilities) to OHI (other health impaired- health needs: ADD, ADHD, seizures, etc.) to ASD (autism spectrum disorder). A resource room means that all the students have a general education homeroom teacher and come to the VE room for some of their learning needs. This allows the students to get special attention but also to work and function in the general
