OUR CHANGING STATE

Models of the World

There are different ways we can study the world's geography. A globe is a model of the Earth. Globes show us where water, land, and countries are located. Globes are useful when you need to see the Earth in a more accurate, spherical shape.

Maps are drawings of places around the world. They show where places are located and how to get there. Maps help us find the direction we need to travel. They can show large areas like continents or small areas like cities. Maps can show elevation, which means height above sea level. They can show the population, or how many people live there. They can also show the climate, or the weather over a long period of time. The person who makes a map is called a cartographer. A cartographer has a point of view and decides what to include on a map.

There are map tools that we use to help us when using maps and globes. Map tools include the title, legend, compass rose, cardinal directions, and scale. The map's title helps us know the map's purpose and the kind of information we will examine on the map. The map's legend is key because it tells us what the symbols and colors on the map represent. Maps have a compass rose. The compass rose is a symbol that shows the cardinal directions: north, south, east, and west. The compass rose can also show the intermediate directions of northeast, northwest, southeast, and southwest. Distance is how far it is from one place to another. You can tell the distance on a map by looking at the scale.
