

Effects of Infant Positioning in the NICU

One of the earliest neurodevelopmental interventions in the NICU is therapeutic positioning.

Temperature

Infants placed prone have higher surface temperatures and narrow central-to-peripheral temperature gradients

Comfort

Physiological flexion promotes self-soothing

Gas Exchange

SpO₂ is higher in left-lateral and prone positions than supine position

Intracranial Regulation

Infants <28 weeks gestational age should have their head placed midline & head of the bed raised 30 degrees for the first 3 days of life to prevent intraventricular hemorrhage

Nutrition

Preemies have lower gastric residuals when placed prone

Cerebral blood flow increases in the supine position and decreases in the prone position

Preterm infants have more apneic and hypoxic episodes when supine

Mobility

Flexed positions promote proper joint alignment and symmetry
Swaddling the legs too tight can cause hip dysplasia

Infant positioning is a nursing intervention, you can improve patient outcomes!
