Davies, 2015-11-12 A people's lifestyle is one thing their death style another The proximity or distance between such styles says much about a society not least in Britain today Mors Britannica takes up this style issue in a society where cultural changes involve distinctions between traditional religion secularisation and emergent forms of spirituality all of which involve emotions where fear longing and a sense of loss rise in waves when death marks the root embodiment of our humanity These world orientations evident in older and newer ritual practices engage death in the hope and desire that love relationships community and human identity be not rendered meaningless Yet both emotions and ritual have an uneasiness to them because death is a slippery topic as the twenty first century gets under way in Britain In this work Douglas J Davies draws from a largely anthropological sociological perspective with consideration of history literature philosophy psychology and theology to provide a window into British life and insights into the foundation links between individuals and society across the spectrum of traditionally religious views through to humanist and secular alternatives He considers memorial sites from churchyards to roadside memorials forms of corporeal disposal from cremation to composting and death rites in a range of religious and secular traditions      Homiletical Theology David Schnasa Jacobsen, 2015-02-13 Karl Barth famously argued that all theology is sermon preparation But what if all sermon preparation is actually theology This book pursues a thoroughgoing theological vision for the practice of preaching as a way of doing theology The idea is not just that homiletics is the realm of theological application That would leave preaching in the position of simply implementing a theology already arrived at Instead the vision in these pages is of a form of theology that begins with preaching itself its practice its theories and its contexts Homiletical theology is thus a unique way of doing theology even a constructive theological task in its own right Homiletician David Schnasa Jacobsen has assembled several of the leading lights of contemporary homiletics to help to see its task ever more deeply as theological yet in profoundly diverse ways Along the way readers will not only discover how homileticians do theology homiletically but will deepen the way in which they understand their own preaching as a theological task
