

PERSONAL STATEMENT FOR NURSING

It was a service trip to Guatemala during my sophomore year of college that convinced me to completely change career path and become a nurse. I had entered my university studies intent on majoring in business, hoping to forge a career as an administrative manager. The service trip was supposed to expose me to the challenges in managing a project, including budgeting and planning for unforeseen occurrences. However, I soon found myself working closely with the nurses that had also accompanied us on the trip, and even began learning basic first aid and medical care techniques. The head nurse told me I was a natural, and was surprised when I told her that I did not come from any medical background at all. I could not have imagined then that at this moment I would be submitting my application for Nursing School.

I returned home after my trip wondering if the path I had chosen was the one that would make me happiest. I started taking Biology courses, and then tentatively switched my major to pre-nursing. Hoping to explore the field more, I joined the Pre-Nursing society, which connected me to professionals in the field and also gave me ample opportunity to volunteer at local hospitals. I took the opportunity to shadow nurses on rounds and learn more about the responsibilities that nurses played in the clinical setting. The more I experienced, the more I knew that this field was my true calling, and it motivated me to work harder to make up for the time I had spent on my other major.

Through the support of my peers and school, I was able to graduate with a nursing degree in only three years. Personal experience and anecdotes from others have shown me that although nursing is a highly challenging and sometimes daunting profession, ultimately it is highly rewarding. I know that I gain a great amount of satisfaction through patient interaction, and as a nurse I will be able to monitor and establish rapport with patients on a daily basis. My coursework and previous experience have given me a strong insider perspective in the field, and I look forward to building upon my knowledge in nursing school as I prepare to serve my patients in the best way I know how.
