Subjective: Unwell, not good, at times there are issues that I cannot resolve on my own and feeling anxious. Very special, I have many employees, "Can you do that?" It's much better rather than talking to people who don't understand me. And I don't talk to people who is not intelligent I prefer being alone than talking nonsense to them.	Distortion in sensory Perception based on the Distortion of the Ability to Assess the Reality	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Client is able to differentiate between reality and unrealistic events or situations. 2. Client is able to recognize thoughts that are not based in reality and intervene to stop their progression. 3. Patients will use the methods they learned to manage their stress and concerns. 4. Patients will be able to assess the stimulants in a manner suiting the reality. 5. Patients will take part in occupational activities 	Improved thought processes demonstrated by clear sentences with no evidence of flight of ideas and completion of simple tasks	Observe clients for signs of delusions, listening post, laughing or talking to self and sleeping in malnutrition Try to connect the times of the misperceptions to times of increased anxiety. Help client to understand this connection. Convey your acceptance of the clients need for the false belief while telling him or her that you do not share the same delusion Do not argue or deny the belief Use the technique of consensual validation and seeking clarification when communication reflects alteration in thinking. Use real situations and events. Reinforce and focus on reality	Early interventions may prevent aggressive responses to command delusions. If client can learn to interrupt the escalating anxiety, reality orientation may be maintained. A positive response would convey to the client that you accept the delusion as reality Arguing with the client or denying the belief serves no purpose because delusional ideas are not eliminated by this approach and the development of the trusting relationship may be impeded These techniques reveal to the client how he or she is being perceived by others, and the responsibility for not understanding is accepted by the nurse To divert client away from long, tedious, repetitive verbalizations of false ideas
