

R1 has no power from headlight switch, so it does not move. IGN switch is on, power to brown Control wires, relays 2 & 3, R2 & R3 control circuits reach ground through the headlight filaments & activate, putting 12V positive to the brown Operating Circuit wires. R3 provides ground for the blue motor Operating wire, R2 energizes the brown Operating wire. Motor operation is ended by opening of outboard limit switches on the headlamp assemblies.

4th relay addition: The headlight close control circuit is powered by the Ign switch, through the diode, goes through the coils of relays 2 & 3, through the connection at R1 to the headlight switch (off), and grounds through the headlight filaments. If LED headlights or HID headlights are added, the path to ground is broken. The 4th relay will be de-energized when headlights are turned off, and will provide the needed blue control circuit ground. Note that this is the control circuit (small blue wires) and not the operating circuit.
