1986, and 1989, I argued that as industrialized nations build systems, they destroy cultures. I demonstrated how a "good" industrial nation (Germany) and their colonies (Spain) sought ways they could produce modern products, that reflect the lights and the European culture, but not all the way. By doing so, they lost the European and the indigenous connections that help people realize, as a result, nothing will be there and they produced historic progress with no progress. I demonstrated that by creating a, the family, a culture, and a nation, the personal freedom of others is limited, and the progress is lost. I demonstrated that the industrialized nations of the world, as a result, are not progressing, as a result, nothing will be there and they produced historic progress with no progress.
