Confronting Hunger in the USA Adam M. Pine, 2016-07-01 Food insecurity in the US is a critical issue that is experienced by approximately 15% of the population each year Hunger is not caused by an inability to produce enough food for the population but is instead a manifestation of federal agricultural policies that support the overproduction of commodity crops and neoliberal social policies that seek to lower the amount of benefits dispersed to those in need This book focuses on how four different food based community programs address both the physical sensation of hunger as well as the political and economic disempowerment that work against the ability of people experiencing food insecurity to mobilize as a political force Confronting Hunger in the USA argues that most food programs do more to create community among their volunteers than among program participants and tend to reinforce neoliberal understandings of citizenship Community food programs reach out to the most vulnerable members of society in caring and gentle ways and often use the language of alternative economies to articulate a different relationship between the individual and the state However the projects in this study act as individual pieces of the state s insufficient social safety net and are only beginning to articulate a new relationship between food and society

Elimination Methods in Polynomial Computer Algebra Valeriĭ Ivanovich Bykov, A. M. Kytmanov, Mark Zakharovich Lazman, Mikael Passare, 1998 This book presents a modified method based on multidimensional residue theory for the elimination of unknowns from a system of nonlinear algebraic equations An algorithm is given for constructing the resultant of the system and a computer implementation making use of formula manipulation software is carried out. Programmes in MAPLE are available. The algorithms and programmes are then applied to questions from the theory of chemical kinetics such as the search for all stationary solutions of kinetic equations and the construction of kinetic polynomials. The subject of this book is closely connected with a wide range of current problems in the analysis of nonlinear systems. Audience: This volume will be of interest to graduate students and researchers whose work involves multidimensional theory of residues, mathematical kinetics, computer algebra and symbolic computation.

Programming Languages Norman Ramsey, 2022-10-27. Computer scientists often need to learn new programming languages quickly. The best way to prepare for this is to understand the foundational principles that underlie even the most complicated industrial languages. This text for an undergraduate programming languages course distills great languages and their design principles down to easy-to-learn bridge languages implemented by interpreters whose key parts are explained in the text. The book goes deep into the roots of both functional and object-oriented programming and it shows how types and modules, including generics and polymorphism, contribute to effective programming. The book is not just about programming languages; it is also about programming. Through concepts, examples and more than 300 practice exercises that exploit the interpreter, students learn not only what programming language features are but also how to do things with them. Substantial implementation projects include Milner's type inference, both copying and mark-and-sweep garbage collection and arithmetic on arbitrary-precision integers.

Algal Biorefineries Aleš Prokop, Rakesh K. Bajpai, Mark E. Zappi, 2015-10-19 Algae offer potential to produce renewable chemicals and fuels using solar energy and carbon dioxide from atmosphere or in flue gases while simultaneously reducing the generation of greenhouse gases Since these can be grown on marginal lands with micronutrients and macronutrients often present in waste streams algae based chemicals and fuels do not compete with foods Still large scale production of algae based fuels and chemicals faces considerable technological and economical challenges and it would by necessity require a biorefinery approach wherein all the possible algal components are converted into value added compounds The present series on algal biorefineries represents a forum for reporting the state of the art of different technologies as well as the latest advances in this field The volume II of this series complements the volume I in terms of the current state of the art Different chapters in this volume address diverse issues ranging from genetically modified algae to new products to life cycle analysis of algal products
