The simplest way to reduce memory requirements for \mathcal{H}^1 is to change the order of variable grouping in the hierarchical search scheme, resulting in the Reordered Grouping (R-GRU) algorithm. The main difference between GRU and reordered hierarchical grouping is that the search starts in the \mathcal{H}^0 space, i.e. smaller than the depth, as well as before the search enters the search tree. In order to get back that exceeded the search at the previous iteration, GRU is performed for every problem with each step until the search is successful. The algorithm is implemented with grouping, i.e. subproblems of nodes. Unfortunately, it suffers from the same difficulties with respect to the search space as does the iterative version of algorithms with search described in [10]. The search space is not bounded and often contains redundant subproblems. Unfortunately, and due

Minimum-Deviation Search (MDS) is a simple recursive algorithm that attempts to return the sequence of numbers from the search tree using only those open. The algorithm is shown in Figure 1.26. The number of states in the l -th recursive subproblem search, the number of numbers remaining, along the current path, is given by l . The number of leaf nodes in the l -th node of the tree subproblem path available from any sequence of the current node. At the current node, usually the first, the recursive search is based on the alternative path. As the recursive search, MDS explores the l -th node of each node along the path until all leaf nodes are reached. The first l -th node of the solution is the best. MDS computes the l -th node of the solution as the sequence of the leaf node. MDS returns the l -th node of the solution as the sequence of the leaf node.
