The Sounds of Social Space Paul Kendall, 2019-01-31 A giant statue of a six pipe musical instrument stands in the heart of Kaili city Yet despite its prominent placement intended to convey the essence of the city residents hold extremely low opinions of music making in Kaili particularly when compared to the authentic music found in surrounding ethnic minority villages In this engaging accessible work author Paul Kendall investigates this conundrum and comes to terms with conflicting representations of a small southwestern Chinese city branded the homeland of one hundred festivals Drawing on Henri Lefebvre's triad of social space the book explores the relationship between Kaili's branding built environment and everyday life how China's post Mao built environment hinders and hides everyday music making even in a tourist destination for ethnic music how residents themselves deny or downplay the existence of ethnic music in the city despite the government's efforts to promote it how amateur musicians have constructed generational hierarchies of musical practice within a shifting cityscape Kendall argues that increased focus on the small city helps counter a tendency to conceive China as either timeless village or futuristic metropolis and enables a more comprehensive understanding of the urban experience both in China and beyond He shows that many Kaili inhabitants recognize not only a rural urban divide long a dominant geographical notion of China but also a more complex conceptualization of village small city and big city By interweaving theories of authenticity with an innovative interpretation of space Kendall shows how the category of fake minority emerged from this small city as a surprisingly positive form of self identification suggesting that there are ways of not being ethnic even in often exoticized southwest China The Sounds of Social Space makes a distinctive contribution across a range of disciplinary interests including Chinese studies urban studies anthropology and ethnomusicology
