

The system is designed to control the motor speed and position. The control logic is implemented using a microcontroller unit (MCU) which receives feedback signals from the motor and generates the appropriate control signals. The system is capable of operating in both open-loop and closed-loop modes. The closed-loop mode provides precise control of the motor position, while the open-loop mode is used for basic speed control. The system is designed to be robust and reliable, capable of operating in a wide range of environmental conditions.
