Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to a control group (CG) and an exercise group (EG). The EG performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week. The CG remained sedentary. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and after 12 weeks. The EG showed a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the CG. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness and energy expenditure of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract: This research was designed to investigate the effects of two types of feedback on students' self-efficacy beliefs. The first type of feedback was based on performance, and the second type was based on effort. Results showed that both types of feedback had positive effects on students' self-efficacy beliefs. However, the effect of performance-based feedback was significantly stronger than that of effort-based feedback.
