

Study of the interactions between organisms and the living and nonliving components of their environment.

Why is it important?

Helps us learn how to improve our effect on the environment.

Our population is EXPLODING!

Human population has tripled from 2 billion in 1950 to 6 billion in 1999. If we keep this pace up our population will be 7.12 billion by 2050.

What are some problems that you see happening here as the population gets larger?

Need more food, water, not enough space for farming, too much waste, etc.

Currently species have been becoming extinct faster than ever before.

Excursions: How can scientists say this when they have only been taking data for only the last 100 or so years.

When the planets Homeostasis is out of whack then odd things happen just like when you get a temperature. You get a temperature because something is not right and your body then needs to right it by giving you a fever. It is like rebooting your computer. The Earth's way of doing this is what we call the Global Warming.

What is the main cause of global warming? High levels of carbon dioxide gas in the atmosphere.

Carbon dioxide and water vapor are transparent to visible light, so they intercept much of the reflected heat and that heat is reflected back to Earth. So it ends up trapping heat.

What are some causes of carbon dioxide being earned into the atmosphere?

Burning fossil fuels, such as coal, oil and natural gas.

This causes global change in weather patterns and rising sea levels due to the melting icecaps.

Diogo,2017-03-08 This book proposes a new way to think about evolution The author carefully brings together evidence from diverse fields of science In the process he bridges the gaps between many different and usually seen as conflicting ideas to present one integrative theory named ONCE which stands for Organic Nonoptimal Constrained Evolution The author argues that evolution is mainly driven by the behavioral choices and persistence of organisms themselves in a process in which Darwinian natural selection is mainly a secondary but still crucial evolutionary player Within ONCE evolution is therefore generally made of mistakes and mismatches and trial and error situations and is not a process where organisms engage in an incessant suffocating struggle in which they can't thrive if they are not optimally adapted to their habitats and the external environment Therefore this unifying view incorporates a more comprehensive view of the diversity and complexity of life by stressing that organisms are not merely passive evolutionary players under the rule of external factors This insightful and well reasoned argument is based on numerous fascinating case studies from a wide range of organisms including bacteria plants insects and diverse examples from the evolution of our own species The book has an appeal to researchers students teachers and those with an interest in the history and philosophy of science as well as to the broader public as it brings life back into biology by emphasizing that organisms including humans are the key active players in evolution and thus in the future of life on this wonderful planet
