

- All drawings, including Piping General Arrangements and Isometrics, have associative dimensions and intelligent annotations, and can therefore be updated automatically in line with design changes.
- Accurate BOM information can be generated on each sheet or drawing, or via separate reports for any System, Line, Area, and so on.
- As the design reaches fabrication, the PDMS spacing functionality manages the creation of individual spread lists, including the creation of fully intelligent word items in the model database, which can be maintained across multiple revision cycles.
- Pipe production checks for bending and flange rotation can be carried out to check against the actual machines to be used for manufacture, to ensure that the design really fits the capabilities of the machines. Flange rotation checking enables checking that both holes in mating flanges are correctly aligned with each other.

PDMS and Spacing

- PDMS provides a specialised function for the design of all types of spacing.
- The function uses an engineering specification to select parametric components from a catalogue allowing a full 3D model to be built.
- A 3D command automatically fits the straight parts of the route with the appropriate number of straight lengths.
- In-line equipment such as dampers, valves, diffusers and hoods can all be included.
- The spacing model can be split into spread parts for manufacture and pre-assembly and automatic spread and isometric drawings can be automatically produced.
- PDMS integration with AutoCAD Multi-Discipline Supports for the design of spacing sub-ports.
