

Uniform Treadle Motion Is Needed

To obtain satisfactory results with any sewing machine, it should be run with a constant, uniform motion. If you are not accustomed to operating a machine, it is a good plan to practice using the treadle (without the machine being threaded) until you are able to produce a steady, even motion.

The Brake Button

The Dancer Model is supplied with a brake button on the treadle belt wheel and hand wheel can be operated without removing the sewing mechanism. This feature makes it possible for you to wind bobbins without unthreading the machine or without removing partly finished work that you may be using on.

Release the Hand Wheel

To release the brake button, hold the hand wheel with the left hand, and with the right hand turn the brake button to the left as far as it will go (see Fig. 1). You will now be able to run the treadle and hand wheel without moving the sewing mechanism of the machine.

You will find it easier to produce a steady, even motion if only one foot is placed on the treadle to operate the machine. Place the foot on the treadle as the lever is about over the center of the treadle. Now turn the hand wheel with your right hand as the top of the wheel comes toward you. This will start the hand wheel and treadle motion and it should be continued by an alternate pressure of the feet and toe upon the treadle.

Practice the Treadle Motion

After a little practice you will be able to produce a steady, even motion of the balance wheel and you will be able to stop and to start the machine without removing it by your hand.

When you are thoroughly familiar with the treadle motion, hold the hand wheel with your left hand and tighten the brake button by turning it to the right (see Fig. 1). Now raise the pressure foot by means of the pressure foot lifter, place a piece of cloth in position on the machine and let the pressure foot down upon it. Now operate the machine and guide the work as though you were sewing.

Do not try to hold the machine by pulling or pushing the work. The machine holds the work without assistance.

Do not run the machine with the pressure foot down unless there is cloth under it, as this may injure the foot or the pressure foot.

How to Wind the Bobbin

Figure 2. This shows how the automatic bobbin winder is turned into position with the small pulley in line with the belt pulley of the machine. Notice how the end of the thread is caught between the lower end of the bobbin and the winder (3) to hold the thread on the bobbin while winding.

Turn the automatic bobbin winder to the right until the small pulley is in line with the belt pulley of the machine and then put the belt over the small pulley as shown in Fig. 4. Now hold the hand wheel with your left hand and release the sewing mechanism by turning the brake button to the left as explained on Page 1. Now operate the treadle of the machine with the distributor arm of the bobbin winder in order to the right as it will go.

Place Bobbin in Holder

Pull the spring knob (1) of the bobbin winder to the left and place an empty bobbin between the winder (2) and (3). Place a spool of thread on the spool pin of the machine and lead the thread down and through the groove at the base of the distributor arm and then up and through the groove at the top of the arm. Pull the bobbin lightly to the left and catch the end of the thread between the right end of the bobbin and the winder (3). This will hold the thread as the bobbin starts to wind.

Now operate the treadle of the machine as you would for sewing and the thread will be automatically wound on the bobbin. Do not wind the bobbin too full as this will prevent it from running freely when it is placed in the shuttle. The thread should not be wound higher than the lower end of the bobbin.

When Finished Winding Bobbins

After you have finished winding bobbins, remove the belt from the small pulley of the bobbin winder and turn it to the left out of the way. Hold the hand wheel of the machine with your left hand and turn the brake button to the right to connect the sewing mechanism.

To Oil the Bobbin Winder

The bobbin winder should receive an occasional drop of oil at the points marked "OIL" in Fig. 3. A very little oil should be placed on the left end of the bobbin (2), in the oil hole near the belt pulley and on the lower end of the distributor arm. Oil should never be put on the right end of the bobbin or in the winder (3) as this is the bottom where which turns the bobbin. Be sure to wipe away any surplus oil so it will not soil the thread or the work you are doing.
