Dessler, Al Ariss: Human Resource Management

Our customers in the Arab world have told us that they want more relevant and accessible learning tools for their students. Because we listen closely to what our customers want, we have developed a series of textbooks – the Arab World Editions – especially for learners in the Arab region. This exciting series of new and adapted titles will use local examples, experiences and opinions to provide user friendly and connected learning for students all across the region.

For Human Resource Management students in the region, Pearson has adapted Dessler's widely used Human Resource Management, to be available in Summer 2012. Especially written with Arab students in mind, this new edition contains cases and trends from across the region, and uses language that also considers readers who have English as a second language.

Comprised of four parts, Human Resource Management covers all the essential areas of the subject including, the history and development of human resource management; recruitment and placement; training development and compensation and employee relations. Throughout the book, links are made between macro human resource management issues and micro, organizational concerns.

This book is accompanied by adapted PowerPoint slides, instructor manual, test bank generator and online tutorial and homework system.

MyManagementLab®

The adapting author, Dr. Akram Al Ariss, says of the edition:

“This is the first textbook on human resource management that has been completely adapted and designed for the Arab market and society. The book provides both thematic and geographical evaluations of human resource management theory and practice in an Arab context. In addition, this edition includes key cross-national and comparative perspectives to provide contextualized learning for its readers.”

Integral Innovation Odeh Rashed Al-Jayyousi, 2017-04-21. Technology plays a critical role in transforming societies and economies through enhancing efficiency, connectivity, and access to resources and services. The challenge remains how to harness technologies to achieve sustainable development without causing harm to human and natural capitals. Professor Odeh Rashed Al-Jayyousi argues that science, technology, and innovation (STI) are underpinned by social choices, and hence a transition to a sustainable green economy is defined by individuals and institutions' decisions on how to use and apply these STI developments. It is therefore important to examine closely the ways in which social institutions and processes in the integral world, the different perspectives of reality, shape the priorities of technologies and the conditions under which their potential benefits can be reaped. He states that in order for technological innovation to provide a guarantee of sustainable economic development, it is necessary that a transfer of technology to developing countries becomes a basic principle of national development policies, and that they in turn are open to adopting an explicit long-term application of technological innovation. Integral Innovation: New Worldviews presents a conceptual framework for the evolution of technology and innovation from a historical and cultural perspective. It provides an analysis of the role of innovation and technology in sustainable development and introduces a number of international case studies which shed light on the social learning processes for knowledge co-creation and innovation culture. It is essential reading for those interested in innovation and technology management.
