

Help Fight World Hunger

Introduction

According to an article written in 2012 by Krista Larson, a writer for News hub writes, 'It's 10am, and the 2-year-old is still waiting for breakfast. Aliou Seyni Diallo collapses to his knees in tears and plops his forehead down on the dirt outside his family's hut. Soon he is wailing inconsolably and writhing on his back in the sand. A neighbor spot him, picks him up easily by one arm, and gives him a little uncooked millet in a metal bowl. The toddler shovels it into his mouth with sticky fingers coated in tears and grime.

The crying stops, for the moment'. Today I want to inform to you guys about how big of an issue the world hunger has become and how our small donation could change the lives of so many. I have lived in a place where hunger did affect many lives and also researched it on articles and other reliable sources. We can only live without food for few days but imagine the millions out there who are trying so hard just to get that one-time meal. So, in the name of humanity, let's put ourselves in their shoes and just try to imagine how different and disconsolate their life is from ours.

Hunger is becoming a major global problem and it's causing some serious health concerns. All the below information shows how hunger is causing some serious life-threatening problems. According to the State of Food Insecurity in the World 2014 External Link (.pdf), published by the U.N.'s Food and Agriculture Organization, International Fund for Agricultural Development, and the World Food Program, the number of undernourished people in the world is 805million, or one in nine.

Hunger is also causing high infant mortality rate. World hunger facts on their website published on 2012 states that 'Malnourished women are more likely to be sick, have smaller babies and die earlier, resulting in high levels of infant mortality in areas where chronic hunger is a problem. And where infant and child mortality is high, birth rates are also high, locking these communities in a vicious cycle of malnutrition and death'. Connective: Although hunger is causing some serious problems around the globe, there are still many solutions to help reduce the increasing number.

We as a people need to step up and take some serious action against the world hunger from increasing. We need to aware people about the causes and effects of world hunger. Jacques Lecarte on the 'European Parliamentary Research' in November 2014 writes, 'Service A recent policy brief from the International Food Policy Research Institute highlights the need for a comprehensive strategy for resolving the problem, which must include concrete actions, improvements in national incomes and democracy, increased resources and political will to invest in health environments, women's education and status, and food availability.

We need to educate people about how a simple meal we waste every day could be saving someone's life.
