The changing face of VR: Pushing the boundaries of experience across multiple industries Jordan Frith, Michael Saker, 2022-09-20 VR occupies an interesting place in the media ecosystem On the one hand it is an emerging cutting edge technology backed by billions of USD by major corporations On the other hand VR is older than the World Wide Web and older than social networking sites

After many years of hype and unfulfilled potential VR is now finally on the precipice of widespread adoption and has begun to be used in novel ways throughout various industries This edited collection brings together a diverse group of authors to analyse the current state of VR while recognizing that these many different use cases will likely become even more important with the increased investment in the technology To examine the current state of VR across multiple sites and industries we compiled a group of practitioners and academics to both examine VR practices and theorize new uses of VR The book also focuses on an inclusive analysis and includes authors from South America North America Europe Australia and Asia and the topics range from analyses of VR use in live events to the ethics of nature based VR apps to the social practices involved in using public VR at museum exhibits As we argue in the introduction this book is one of the first to bring together authors from different backgrounds and disciplines to chart just how widely VR has already spread And maybe most importantly the topics covered in this book will only become more relevant as VR continues to grow especially in the wake of the growth of the supposed Metaverse

Reading Like a Historian Avishag Reisman, 2011 Enthusiasm about the instructional potential of primary sources dates to the late 19th century and has been echoed recently in the work of literacy experts historians and educational psychologists Yet no extended intervention study has been undertaken to test the effectiveness of primary source instruction in real history classrooms This study with 236 eleventh grade students in five San Francisco high schools represented the first large scale extended curriculum intervention in disciplinary reading in an urban district The Reading Like a Historian RLH curriculum constituted a radical departure from traditional textbook driven instruction by using a new activity structure the Document Based Lesson in which students used background knowledge and disciplinary reading strategies to interrogate and then reconcile historical accounts from multiple texts A quasi experiment control design measured the effects of a six month intervention on four dimensions 1 students historical thinking 2 their ability to transfer historical thinking strategies to contemporary issues 3 their mastery of factual knowledge and 4 their growth in general reading comprehension MANCOVA analysis yielded significant main effects for the treatment condition on all four outcome measures Qualitative analyses of videotaped classroom lessons were conducted to determine the frequency and nature of whole class text based discussion Only nine whole class text based discussions were identified in over 100 videotaped classroom lessons despite the presence of instructional materials explicitly designed to support student discussion of debatable historical questions Analysis of teacher and student participation suggests a relationship between active teacher facilitation that reviews background knowledge and poses direct questions about texts and higher levels of student argumentation This dissertation is structured as three free standing papers each of which addresses one aspect of the larger study In the first paper I discuss the design of the quasi experimental study and report quantitative findings In the second paper I locate teacher facilitation of whole class historical discussion in the literature on classroom discourse and I propose a developmental framework for analyzing student historical argumentation in classroom discussion In the third and final paper I discuss the theoretical underpinnings of the intervention curriculum and offer two examples to illustrate the structure of the Document Based Lesson
