The Perception of Visual Information William Thomson, Peter N.T. Wells, 2013-03-09 Human knowledge is primarily the product of experiences acquired through interactions of our senses with our surroundings Of all the senses vision is the one relied on most heavily by most people for sensory input about the environment Visual interactions can be divided into three processes 1 detection of visual information 2 recognition of the external source of the information and 3 interpretation of the significance of the information These processes usually occur sequentially although there is considerable interdependence among them With our strong dependence on the processes of visual interactions we might assume that they are well characterized and understood Nothing could be further from the truth Human vision remains an enigma in spite of speculations by philosophers for centuries and more recently of attention from physicists and cognitive and experimental psychologists How we see and how we know what we see remains an unsolved mystery that challenges some of the most creative scientists and cognitive specialists Pediatric Ophthalmology and Strabismus Yi Ning J.
