

A Winter's Drive

by ReadWorks

It was raining ice. He flinched every time a hard pellet hit his windshield, threatening to crack it. They were like stones, or worse, because they were frozen. He wondered how many of them would have to strike the same spot to bore a hole in the glass. Michael was approaching the Canadian-U.S. border at Plattsburgh, in upstate New York. He hadn't left the United States in nine years. He fingered his new passport, its pliant navy cover, and marveled at the date printed inside: it wasn't expired. How long since he had had an unexpired passport? He did not even know. He had thrown the last one away.

The lines of cars advancing toward the customs agents in their boxes were long. Michael knew he would choose one and immediately regret his decision. No matter which queue you chose, the other one, the one you hadn't chosen, would suddenly pick up speed, and begin to move at an incredible pace. There was no way around it. His father had always told him to aim for a female agent, that the female agents were nicer. His mother had always told him the opposite: the men are less likely to give you a hard time. It seemed, now, that he and his car were headed for a tall woman with a blonde ponytail.

What would he tell her? Michael realized that he had rented a car, packed a day's worth of clothes, picked up a lunch, spent countless hours reviewing what he would do when he arrived in Canada, but he hadn't for one second thought about what he might tell the border patrol officer. He searched his brain and found nothing. The cars inched forward. In three cars it would be his turn. In one hour, if the agent let him pass, he would be in Montreal. He ate the last of the cold French fries he had picked up from a drive-through earlier that morning and crumpled the paper bag.

It was his turn.
