

Tornado Scientists

by Christopher

Tornadoes form when swirling winds spin. Wind is invisible, but air can see formations themselves that spinning wind picks up dust, dirt, and debris. This swirling wind forms a funnel that resembles a giant vacuum cleaner sucking up the ground.

When a tornado is close, people run. They can see over 200 miles per hour wind speeds as fast as airplanes. As they move across the land, they can easily pick up cars, houses, and even people. Scientists observe these storms every day. It is important to find a safer place to take shelter if a tornado gets close.

A safe place could be a basement or first floor of a building, depending on where you are. If you are in a house without a basement, try to find a low-lying area without windows or doors for a few minutes of your storm. You should put up with additional emergency preparedness with your home. Stay in a safe place until the storm passes.

But if you are alone, you should seriously think about the tornadoes. They are extremely rare events for many years about tornadoes. There are few local maps to show the best and worst areas possible for these storms. They use special equipment and data to provide the most accurate information on what should be done.
