

A photograph of a man and three children in a slum. The man, in the center background, is wearing a brown shawl and has a somber expression. In the foreground, three children are looking towards the camera: a boy on the left, a girl in the middle, and a girl on the right wearing a pink shirt. The background shows a makeshift structure made of white plastic sheeting and wooden poles, typical of a slum environment.

Inheriting the World Bruce Allan Gordon, Richard Mackay, Eva Rehfuess, World Health Organization, 2004 Highly commended in the Public Health Category of the British Medical Association Book Competition 2005 Every child has the right to live in a healthy supportive environment an environment that encourages growth and development and protects from disease Many of the world's children however are exposed to hazards in the very places that should be safest the home school and community Considering that their growing bodies are particularly sensitive to environmental threats the final burden of childhood disease is substantial Every year more than three million children die due to unhealthy environments This atlas articulates where and why more than three million children die every year due to unhealthy environments It tackles issues as diverse as the devastating and largely unknown impact of indoor air pollution the unfashionable tragedy of sanitation and complex emerging issues like climate change Full color maps and graphics clearly demonstrate the threats that children face everywhere and underscore the impact of poverty on children's health While this crisis cannot be ignored and demands urgent action success stories
