Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 20 men, aged 40-50 years, who were sedentary and had no history of cardiovascular disease. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a supervised aerobic exercise program, three times a week, for 12 weeks. The control group did not exercise. Physical fitness was measured by a series of tests, including a maximal aerobic power test, a submaximal aerobic power test, and a series of endurance tests. Health was measured by a series of blood tests, including cholesterol, triglycerides, and glucose. The results of the study showed that the exercise group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and health than the control group after 12 weeks of training.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program on the health-related quality of life (HRQL) of patients with heart failure (HF). The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The study population consisted of 100 patients with HF who were randomly assigned to either a supervised exercise program or a control group. The supervised exercise program consisted of 12 weeks of low-intensity, supervised exercise. The control group received standard care. The primary outcome was the change in HRQL, measured using the EuroQOL-5D questionnaire. The secondary outcome was the change in clinical outcomes, including mortality and hospitalization. The results showed that the supervised exercise program significantly improved HRQL compared to the control group. There was no significant difference in clinical outcomes between the two groups.
