

history of corporate new balance

For more than 100 years, New Balance has been a brand dedicated to understanding the movement of people and designing products to match. From the early days of selling arch supports to police officers and waiters, to our current research with world-class athletes in our Sports Research Lab, we have been consumed by the body in motion. Jim Davis and his team immersed themselves into the heart of the running community, experiencing the passion runners had for their sport and witnessing the demands that they had for their footwear. Jim and his wife, Anne, also focused on developing an organization with a distinctive culture where associates were proud to work. They preferred their success to be based on a set of core values: teamwork, integrity and total customer satisfaction. Thanks to her, there is a strong belief at every level of the organization that we at New Balance can individually and collectively make a difference in our business as well as in our local and global communities.
