Wood,2017-01-20 Jason Wood is Director of Heritage Consultancy Services Lancaster UK and former Professor of Cultural Heritage at Leeds Metropolitan University UK The Architecture of Pleasure Josephine Kane,2016-03-16 The amusement parks which first appeared in England at the turn of the twentieth century represent a startlingly novel and complex phenomenon combining fantasy architecture new technology ersatz danger spectacle and consumption in a new mass experience Though drawing on a diverse range of existing leisure practices the particular entertainment formula they offered marked a radical departure in terms of visual experiential and cultural meanings The huge socially mixed crowds that flocked to the new parks did so purely in the pursuit of pleasure which the amusement parks commodified in exhilarating new guises Between 1906 and 1939 nearly 40 major amusement parks operated across Britain By the outbreak of the Second World War millions of people visited these sites each year The amusement park had become a defining element in the architectural psychological pleasurescape of Britain This book considers the relationship between popular modernity pleasure and the amusement park landscape in Britain from 1900 1939 It argues that the amusement parks were understood as a new and distinct expression of modern times which redefined the concept of public pleasure for mass audiences Focusing on three sites Blackpool Pleasure Beach Dreamland in Margate and Southend's Kursaal the book contextualises their development with references to the wider amusement park world The meanings of these sites are explored through a detailed examination of the spatial and architectural form taken by rides and other buildings The rollercoaster a defining symbol of the amusement park is given particular focus as is the extent to which discourses of class gender and national identity were expressed through the design of these parks Peripheral Locations in European TV Crime Series Kim Toft Hansen,Valentina Re,2023-10-17 This book is a comprehensive study of peripheral locations in contemporary European TV crime series Ambitiously it covers the complete geography of Europe and offers a nuanced image of a changing dynamic and unfinished continent The chapters include analyses of the practical creative approach to producing crime series in European peripheries and rural areas evaluating a continent marked by an internal crisis between urban and rural Europe The study includes readings of crime series such as Shetland Bitter Daisies Trom Pagan Peak and The Border but presents such representative cases within broader tendencies on the European TV market including challenges from streaming services the influence of Nordic Noir and changes within the cognitive geography of Europe The authors position peripheral European crime series in a complex relationship between universal appeal and local recognisability and offer a comprehensive theoretical approach to the aesthetics of peripherality Grounded in desktop production studies the book presents an original scholarly approach to analysing European crime series from a continental point of view Despite local differences the spatio generic orientations scrutinized in the book Nordic Noir Mediterranean Noir Country Noir Eastern Noir and Brit Noir show remarkable aesthetic similarities in series from territories otherwise normally unconnected in television production Consequently television crime series reveal a common tongue and voice for dialogue on a continent in a deepening crisis

Looking North Dave Russell, 2004-10 Investigating areas as diverse as travel literature fiction dialect the stage radio television feature film music and sport this book assesses the portrayal of the North of England within the national culture and how this has impacted upon attitudes to the region and its place within notions of Englishness The relationship between these cultural forms and the construction of regional identity has received only limited consideration and this fascinating work provides not only much new information but also a map for future writers The North although seen ultimately as other and the subject of much critical comment is also shown here as capable of stimulating the creative imagination and invigorating English culture in sometimes surprising ways
