Engineering Environments David J. Gilmore,Russel L. Winder,Francoise Detienne,2013-06-29 The idea for this workshop originated when I came across and read Martin Zelkowitz's book on Requirements for Software Engineering Environments the proceedings of a small workshop held at the University of Maryland in 1986 Although stimulated by the book I was also disappointed in that it didn't adequately address two important questions Whose requirements are these and Will the environment which meets all these requirements be usable by software engineers And thus was the decision made to organise this workshop which would explicitly address these two questions As time went by setting things up it became clear that our workshop would happen more than five years after the Maryland workshop and thus at the same time as addressing the two questions above this workshop would attempt to update the Zelkowitz approach Hence the workshop acquired two halves one dominated by discussion of what we already know about usability problems in software engineering and the other by discussion of existing solutions technical and otherwise to these problems This scheme also provided a good format for bringing together those in the HeI community concerned with the human factors of software engineering and those building tools to solve acknowledged but rarely understood problems Tutorials in Biostatistics, Statistical Methods in

Urologic Oncology Timothy L. Ratliff, William J. Catalona, 2012-12-06 The study of genitourinary tumors is an area of recent rapid growth both in the understanding of disease processes and in the development of new diagnostic and therapeutic modalities During rapid growth phases within any field it is desirable to reflect on the current state of the art It is difficult even for experts in reputed areas of advancement to distinguish true advances from false leads but it is far more difficult yet for those whose expertise lies in other areas to evaluate important advances Thus an objective assessment of evolving areas of investigation in the form of a comprehensive review is of considerable value we have attempted to provide the reader with an overview In this volume view of some of the current areas of investigation in urologic oncology by experts in each area There often is a tendency for invited papers in books of this nature to lack important critical peer review and therefore suffer from a lack of objectivity We have attempted to diminish this problem by the selection of two experts to discuss each subject We believe that this format has improved the overall quality of the book for two reasons 1 the knowledge of each contributor that his or her work would be reviewed by a peer 2 the fact that contributions by encourages more rigorous scholarship and two experts including the individual insights of each provides a better perspective for the reader College and Clinical Record ,1885
