approachable and articulate study Philip C Schmitz offers close interpretations of six ancient texts four previously published Phoenician and Punic inscriptions and two Phoenician inscriptions published for the first time The author selected the previously known texts because readings of their letters and interpretation of their grammar and syntax are not yet well established Each of the selected texts stands as an original source concerning Phoenician settlement in the western Mediterranean Phoenician activity in Egypt or the economic life and religious beliefs and practices of ancient Carthage Chapter 1 rapidly surveys the history of Phoenician Punic epigraphy and offers a limited inventory of recent publications of epigraphic texts Chapter 2 undertakes a new reading and translation of the Phoenician stele from Nora Sardinia CIS I 144 Chapter 3 edits and translates the larger Phoenician inscriptions from Abu Simbel in Egypt CIS I 112 Chapter 4 concerns the paleographic analysis of selected Phoenician graffiti from Tell el Maskhuta Chapter 5 publishes an overlooked dipinto inscription on an amphora excavated at Carthage An appendix by Joann Freed contextualizes the amphora Chapter 6 takes a text critical look at CIS I 6068 an enigmatic Punic inscription on lead thought since its discovery to be a curse text Schmitz argues that it is not a curse but a quittance for debt Chapter 7 is a new reading and translation of CIS I 6000bis a Punic epitaph from the Hellenistic period of Carthage Among the features of this book that may interest students and scholars are new translations and interpretations of important inscriptions the translation and interpretation of which have been disputed previously unpublished photographs of inscriptions illustrating difficult readings author s hand drawings of difficult readings and grammatical analysis with reference to other known texts and standard reference works      Engineering & Contracting
