Lab # _____ : Leaf Structure & StomatesBackground

Plants are incredible organisms! They can make all their own food from the simple inputs of sunlight, air (carbon dioxide), and water. This biological wizardry is accomplished through the magic of photosynthesis. This process can be summarized by the equations below.

or the process can be written as

This means that plants are able to harness the energy of the sun to turn CO_2 into the air into the carbon-based molecules of life – carbohydrates, proteins, lipids, and nucleic acids.

Plants capture the sun's light within their green leaves. Inside a leaf's cells are green organelles – chloroplasts – which do all this hard work of producing the food that feeds the plant . . . and, in fact, the whole rest of the world too!

To do this job best, leaves have evolved a specific structure – there are 3 types of tissue arranged in layers:

- epidermis
- mesophyll
- vascular tissue

The epidermis is the outer layer of cells that acts like a protective “skin” for the leaf. Covering the epidermis is a waxy coating, called the cuticle, which stops evaporation of water from the leaves thereby helping plants conserve water. In the lower epidermis are openings called stomates (singular, stoma or stomate) surrounded by two cells called guard cells. The stomates act like the lungs of the plant in that they allow gas exchange – letting CO_2 into the inner plant tissues for photosynthesis and then allowing O_2 out as a waste product of photosynthesis.

The mesophyll is the main inner leaf tissue making up the blade of the leaf. Most of the photosynthesis of the plant takes place in the mesophyll. The mesophyll in the upper part of the leaf is made up of tightly packed cells, full of chloroplasts, and is called the palisades layer. The mesophyll in the lower part of the leaves is made up of loosely packed cells and is called the spongy layer.
