

The Elements of a Sentence

A sentence is a group of words that are related to different groups and make up the whole meaning. The main elements of a sentence are subject, verb, object, complement, and modifier (Razzoqovich, 2022). A wide variety of sentences can be created with the use of these elements, and the meaning can differ, making the paper more appealing. Therefore, it is important to understand how every concept is used and what are the differences that can change the meaning of the information.

Subject

The subject is one of the main parts of the sentence structure as it allows to transfer of the message correctly and ensures that it is full and clear. Schlesinger (2019) stated that the subject could be a noun or a pronoun that usually describes the verb's action. Additionally, this part of the sentence can be explained by the verb. Many topics related to the sentences are created based on subjects, and it is easy to understand where it is located. One of the common examples can be seen in monosyllabic sentences like "He is taking the exam," where "he" is the subject.

Verb

Verbs have approximately the same importance as subjects in the sentence. The main role of this concept is to show the state of the object and express the action that is happening in the information transferred in the sentence (Schlesinger, 2019). The verb usually follows the subject to build logical flow. In the sentence "she eats her lunch," the word "eats" is a verb as it shows an individual's action. In the majority of cases, verbs can dictate the tense and the voice of the message. The most common example is the use of the Present Simple and Present Continues to change the meaning of the sentence.

Object

Objects can be in different forms such as noun, pronoun, or noun phrase. This part of the sentence is one of the most complicated to understand and is not used in most of the monosyllabic expressions. Object usually explains the person or the thing which is affected by the verb (Schlesinger, 2019). For example, in the sentence "He bought a new phone" the word "phone" is an object as the action was conducted over this product.
