The British National Bibliography Arthur James Wells, 2006. The Future of Information Architecture Peter Baofu, 2008-03-31. The Future of Information Architecture examines issues surrounding why information is processed, stored, and applied in the way that it has since time immemorial. Contrary to the conventional wisdom held by many scholars in human history, the recurrent debate on the explanation of the most basic categories of information (e.g., space, time, causation, quality, quantity) has been misconstrued to the effect that there exists some deeper categories and principles behind these categories of information with enormous implications for our understanding of reality in general. To understand this, the book is organized into four main parts. Part I begins with the vital question concerning the role of information within the context of the larger theoretical debate in the literature. Part II provides a critical examination of the nature of data taxonomy from the
