QUESTION	ANSWER
How does the brain work?	QUESTION ANSWER The brain is the central organ of the nervous system. It receives information from the senses and sends out instructions to the rest of the body. The brain is divided into two halves, the left and right hemispheres. Each hemisphere is further divided into four lobes: the frontal lobe, the parietal lobe, the temporal lobe, and the occipital lobe. The frontal lobe is responsible for reasoning, planning, and problem-solving. The parietal lobe is responsible for processing sensory information. The temporal lobe is responsible for processing auditory information. The occipital lobe is responsible for processing visual information. The brain is also responsible for controlling the body's movements and maintaining its internal balance.
How does the brain control the body's movements?	QUESTION ANSWER The brain controls the body's movements through the motor cortex, which is located in the frontal lobe. The motor cortex sends out signals to the muscles, which then contract and relax to produce movement. The brain also controls the body's movements through the cerebellum, which is located at the back of the brain. The cerebellum is responsible for coordinating movements and maintaining balance.
How does the brain process sensory information?	QUESTION ANSWER The brain processes sensory information through the sensory cortex, which is located in the parietal lobe. The sensory cortex receives information from the senses and processes it into a form that the brain can understand. The brain also processes sensory information through the thalamus, which is located in the center of the brain. The thalamus acts as a relay station, passing information from the senses to the appropriate part of the brain for processing.
How does the brain control the body's internal balance?	QUESTION ANSWER The brain controls the body's internal balance through the hypothalamus, which is located in the center of the brain. The hypothalamus is responsible for regulating the body's temperature, hunger, thirst, and other internal functions. The brain also controls the body's internal balance through the endocrine system, which is a system of glands that secrete hormones into the bloodstream. The hormones then travel throughout the body and affect various organs and tissues.
