

for he could not believe what he saw. Strange and pretty plants grew on the bottom of the sea. Glistening red, blue, and yellow fish of all sizes and shapes swam everywhere. Schools of tiny fish played among the pink and blue coral. Everything was like a dream. It was most beautiful and quiet.

The king welcomed Taro warmly and held a big feast in his honour. The king asked Taro to marry his daughter and stay with them forever. He agreed because he found the idea of living in the sea very charming.

Taro lived happily for many years with his wife in the Coral Palace. One day, his wife took him to a room which had a window on each side. When he opened the first window, he saw spring. At the second window, he saw summer. The third window showed him autumn and the last window showed his village in winter. Taro longed to go back to his village and meet his parents.

“I want to go back to my village,” said Taro. The sea princess agreed to let him go and gave him a magic box as a gift. “Look after it well and we shall meet again. But you must never open it.”

Stop and guess.
Do you think they will meet again? What will happen next?

When taro reached his village, nothing was the same. Not one familiar face remained, and Taro felt like a stranger. Taro asked many people about his parents, but hardly anyone seemed even to have heard of them. He asked them about Urashima Taro but they said, “Urashima Taro drowned many, many years ago.”

He couldn't believe what he heard. He did not know what to do, so forgetting what his wife had told him, he opened the box. As soon as the box was opened, he became an old man with hair as white as snow.
