

SAVE TREES

- Trees are one of the most important things for the survival of any life on the planet; we are dependent on trees.
- Trees are as crucial to the earth as the lungs are to human beings.
- The variety of flora and fauna exists because of the shelter trees that provide; otherwise, it would be extinct.
- A large forest cover helps in preventing natural calamities like floods and droughts.
- Saving trees should be a priority because they provide the essential requirement for our survival which is oxygen.
- Trees help keep the atmosphere of the earth livable and moderate, increasing every year because of the large amount of deforestation around the world.
- Deforestation is causing the earth's temperature to rise, leading to an environmental crisis like Climate Change.
- One of the best ways to stop the cutting down of trees is to start using recycled products.
- Saving trees will help the humankind save itself because, without trees, any form of existence on this planet will cease to exist.

The contributors give critical attention to Gardner's most ambitious films such as Dead Birds 1963 New Guinea Rivers of Sand 1975 Ethiopia and Forest of Bliss 1986 India as well as lesser known films that equally exemplify his mode of seeking anthropological understanding through artistic means. They also attend to his films about artists including his self-depiction in Still Journey On 2011 to his roots in experimental film and his employment of experimental procedures and to his support of independent filmmakers through the Harvard Film Study Center and the television series Screening Room which provided an opportunity for numerous important film and video artists to present and discuss their work. This book is a monumental fearless and insightful contribution of critique that looks both with and at Gardner's works as a whole.
