looking to review or learn the essentials of major theories of counseling and psychotherapy Anger Disorders Howard Kassinove, 2014-02-25 Anger is a daily experience It is encountered in a number of interpersonal family and occupational situations Research indicates that even normal parents worry that they will lose control of their anger and harm their children When short lived and of low intensity anger may be of some help to us in contrast when it is persistent and intense it is typically highly disruptive This text reviews facts and theories of anger Anger is differentiated from annoyance fury rage hostility and the behaviours of aggression and violence and attention is paid to understanding anger both as a normal experience and as a clinical disorder Specific anger diagnoses are presented to describe disruptive anger states and traits Anger in criminal populations is also discussed and behaviour analytic cognitive constructivist and cross cultural perspectives are presented in detail The book argues that it is important to understand the causes correlations and outcomes of anger and to develop effective remediation programmes when anger is excessive and disruptive Thus following a meta analyses of the effectiveness of published treatments two chapters present ideal therapy programmes for adult and childhood adolescent anger disorders Finally a model is presented to help understand anger development and resolution To be Or Not Delphus David Bourland, Paul Dennithorne Johnston, 1991 Comprehensive Handbook of Cognitive Therapy Hal Arkowitz, L.E. Beutler, Karen M. Simon, 2013-06-29 In reviewing the Contents of this Handbook edited by Freeman Simon Beutler and Arkowitz I am both impressed and gratified with the enormous strides made by cognitive behavior therapy since the late 1960s A perusal of the Contents reveals that it is used with adults children couples and families it is clinically appropriate for such problems as anxiety depression sexual dysfunctions and addictions and it is employed in conjunction with psychopharmacological and other psychotherapeutic interventions It was in the mid 1960s when Breger and McGaugh published an article in the Psychological Bulletin taking behavior therapists to task for using only classical and operant principles in devising their therapeutic interventions Breger and McGaugh argued that the field of learning was undergoing a major revolution paying considerably more attention to cognitive processes than had previously been the case In short they criticized the growing behavioral orientation for being limited in its exclusively peripheralistic orientation At the time behavior therapists were initially somewhat resistant to any allusion to cognitive metaphors Indeed my own initial reactions to the Breger and McGaugh article was quite negative Yet in rereading their critique many of their suggestions now seem most appealing No doubt I and my behavior colleagues lacked the appropriate cognitive set for incorporating such contradictory information Nonetheless the clinical evidence for the relevance of cognitive factors in the behavior change process was simply too compelling to ignore
