

The process of Galileo - inquisitorial trial of 70-year-old physicist and astronomer Galileo, held in 1633 in Rome. Galileo was accused of supporting the banned public heliocentric system of Copernicus, which the Catholic Church has earlier condemned as heretical doctrine (1616). As a result of the process, despite the agreement to renounce Copernicanism and repent, Galileo was sentenced to life in prison, which was soon changed to the house arrest and lifetime supervision of the Inquisition.

"Galileo process subsequently became a symbol of the confrontation between science and religion - or, more generally, freedom of thought and dogmatic (political or religious) teachings, claiming the absolute monopoly of the spiritual."(McMullen, 2003). Link to this process is often used as an argument in the debate on these topics.

The condemnation of Galileo by the Inquisition is a historical event, for which the mass of studies already carried out including different works with the archives of the Vatican. Though this story obviously tells how narrow-minded official Church is, the process of condemnation of Galileo had some positive moments which cleanse the reputation of Vatican. In relation to the Copernican theory, Pope from the beginning demonstrated some tolerance, though, of course, he did not act on its behalf. He stayed at the opinion that any astronomical theory will only hypothesis and it cannot be proved. At the same time the new pope expressed his respect and admiration towards the Galileo. Moreover, in 1616, Cardinal opposed the declaration of the Copernican theory as heretical. Despite the entire situation that occurred in reference with Galileo's condemnation which blackened the image of the Church, the real historical events tell us that Church saved some prudence

Cambridge Companion to Religion and Terrorism James R. Lewis, 2017-07-25 There is currently much discussion regarding the causes of terrorist acts as well as the connection between terrorism and religion Terrorism is attributed either to religious fanaticism or alternately to political and economic factors with religion more or less dismissed as a secondary factor The Cambridge Companion to Religion and Terrorism examines this complex relationship between religion and terrorism phenomenon through a collection of essays freshly written for this volume Bringing varying approaches to the topic from the theoretical to the empirical the Companion includes an array of subjects such as radicalization suicide bombing and rational choice as well as specific case studies The result is a richly textured collection that prompts readers to critically consider the cluster of phenomena that we have come to refer to as terrorism and terrorism's relationship with the similarly problematic set of phenomena that we call religion

Gender, Religion, Extremism Katherine E. Brown, 2020-06-15 Radicalization and the terrorism that is frequently linked to it have been subject to much study and governmental intervention Nevertheless the processes that lead to radicalization remain thinly conceptualized although governments and their agencies worldwide have invested heavily in counter and de radicalization programs There are at least 34 anti radicalization programs worldwide most of which were initiated post 2001 with a focus on Muslims and Muslim communities These policies and programs have led to interventions in the daily lives of thousands often in ways that push the boundaries of human rights law and norms However the effectiveness of these programs is unclear This book compares anti radicalization programs that target Islamic extremism in the UK Saudi Arabia Indonesia the Netherlands and Pakistan It looks particularly at the ways in which the program tactics differ depending on the gender of the target arguing that the gendered way in which anti radicalization is pursued helps to reveal its limitations These programs fail to take into account how masculinity and femininity inform the radicalization process Moreover the programs tend to link men's radicalization to excessive but flawed masculinity and women's radicalization to passivity which consequentially limits understandings of the various modes of belief belonging and behavior of those they are trying to engage Solutions for male de radicalization hinge on particular ideals of masculinity that few men can obtain while the de radicalization of women is seen as a rescue mission Although the rhetoric of battling terrorism is often couched in a narrative of women's rights and liberal values the book demonstrates that the consequences of the programs often run counter to such ideals The book's findings are applicable not just to de radicalization programs but also to broader counter radicalization agendas that address resilience and community engagement The book also highlights the way in which anti radicalization measures hew to or differ from older programs addressing right wing extremism anti cult measures and sectarianism Ultimately Gender Religion Extremism proposes an alternative way of implementing anti radicalization efforts that are rooted in a feminist peace one that is transformative inclusive and sustainable

Conversations and Controversies in the Scientific Study of Religion, 2016-02-15 Luther H Martin and Donald Wiebe together have spent the better part of a century exploring possibilities for a scientific study of religion The following essays are a record of their conversations together and of their conversations and controversies with a number of leading scholars in religious studies that address that possibility As with any scientific endeavor knowledge advances when research assumptions and experimental designs are collegially discussed and critically assessed It is hoped that these essays might provide the occasion for scholars in the field to discuss the theoretical and methodological issues they have raised to debate and expand upon them or in the spirit of forthright scientific inquiry to refute the arguments they have made

Religion, Religious Organisations and Development Carole Rakodi, 2016-04-04 This collection adds to a burgeoning literature concerned with the roles played by religions in development The authors do not assume that religion and religious organisations can be used to achieve development objectives or that religiously inspired development work is more holistic transformative and authentic Instead they subject such assumptions to critical and as far as possible objective scrutiny focusing on how adherents of several religious traditions and a variety of organisations affiliated with different religions perceive the idea of development and attempt to contribute to its objectives Geographically chapters in the volume encompass Africa South Asia and the Asia Pacific Four of the papers have an international focus providing a preliminary framework for analysing the role of religion in development considering the roles played by faith inspired organisations in two regions the Asia Pacific and Sub Saharan Africa and analysing transnational Muslim NGOs The individual case studies focus on nine countries India Kenya Pakistan Nigeria Tanzania Sudan Malawi Sri Lanka South Africa consider four religions Islam Hinduism Christianity Buddhism and can be grouped under four themes they consider religion wellbeing and inequality the roles of religious NGOs in development whether and how religious organisations influence respond to or resist social change and whether religious service providers reach the poor Finally practice notes show how three religious development organisations try to put their principles into practice This book was published as a special double issue of Development in Practice
