Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week walking program, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The primary outcome was the change in physical fitness, measured by the 6-minute walk test. Secondary outcomes included changes in body mass index (BMI), blood pressure, heart rate, and psychological well-being, measured by the Beck Depression Inventory (BDI). The walking program resulted in a significant increase in the 6-minute walk distance (p < 0.05) and a significant decrease in BMI (p < 0.05). There were no significant changes in blood pressure, heart rate, or BDI scores. The results suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity walking program can improve physical fitness and BMI in sedentary, middle-aged women.
