Teacher Self Reflection Journal

I grew up in a high-needs area and are personally connected to struggle of children who come from low-income families and go to school with little funding, so I feel like being a teacher I will be contributing to my community in a meaningful way. It has always been my dream to try a make an impact to help those around me. When I will be in a classroom and teach, I will not be just an educator, I will be a mentor and most of all I will be a friend. What I like the most is that I will be making a massive different in the lives of many students. Teachers have the potential to interact with students at all stages of developmental from all walks of life. A great teacher I feel like I will be is to help them with their self-esteem.

Teachers are life-long learners. Life long learning is a form of self-initiated education that is focused on personal development. It is generally a learning that occurs outside a formal learning institute, such as a school, university or corporate training. I can say in general we are all life-long learners. But individually as I want to become a teacher, I want to set an example to my students because I want to practice what I teach, this in turn will encourage my learners to be life-long learners.

The skills that I acquire for being a teacher is to have good communication with the leaners, this can be verbal, written, or via any other route from practical demonstration. The second skill is to be patient as people learn at different rates, even if you have to explain something seven times in seven different ways its ok because its part of the job. Another skill is creativity, I know that there are different learners who learn best when they are doing something fun and interesting .Teaching comes with dedication, if I will be dedicated to helping my students succeed, I will be able to keep up my energy levels and avoid getting discouraged. The last skill is to be organized. I will be a very organized teacher which will help me make lesson planning around school hours.

I had difficulties when I was in high school in grasping concept in the classroom due to quality of teachers and I believe that no children deserve to be overlooked to make job easier. want to remind the education world that teaching is passion, not a pay check. I enjoy being part of learning experience and to help student understand that with knowledge comes power.

One of the most important things this module taught me is to discover myself. I first discovered my hidden goals such as my goals for my personal life. To know my vision as well as my mission. Why I am at the university. It made me to think back to where I come from and that really motivated me to work really hard to go back and change my background as well as educating the children back where I am from because teaching is a profession that teaches all other professions.

Reflection Paper Sample On Teaching:

Scholarship of Teaching and Learning in Speech-Language Pathology and Audiology Sarah M. Ginsberg, Jennifer Friberg, Colleen F. Visconti, 2011-10-05 Developing Reflective TESOL Practitioners Through Teacher Education Andrzej Cirocki, Mark Wyatt, Xuesong (Andy) Gao, 2024-06-26 This textbook provides insights from Asian contexts into how reflective practice is nurtured on Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages TESOL and English Language Teaching ELT teacher education programmes There is increasing recognition worldwide that given the centrality of reflective practice to teachers ongoing professional development supporting teachers to become reflective practitioners should be integral to teacher education programmes Consequently tertiary level courses in areas such as TESOL and ELT tend to promote reflective practice supported by theoretical input from the burgeoning literature on reflection much of which is produced in the West Relatively under represented in the literature are global perspectives on reflective practice there are consequently relatively few accounts as to how reflective practice is embedded in teacher education programmes in different parts of the world including Asia Hence this book addresses a gap Contributing authors from fourteen countries provide insights into the ways in which teachers are helped to grow as reflective practitioners on their teacher education programmes in their unique contexts This textbook showcases how reflective teaching practices are developed supported by frameworks for critical reflection and in interaction with local educational policies These distinctive accounts aid readers in reflecting on the ways in which reflective practice is supported in their own teacher education contexts and in considering ways of enhancing the reflective dimension of their programmes This textbook showcases innovative reflective activities and can be used as a principal text or as supplemental reading on a range of TESOL and ELT teacher education courses The Course Reflection Project Nicole Schonemann, Emily Metzgar, Andrew Libby, 2015-05-01 Service learning is entering a post initiatory phase At tertiary institutions of all types and sizes service learning programs are common and service learning requirements for graduation are growing in popularity Taken together alongside continued faculty interest in effective teaching these factors have raised the visibility and popularity of service learning Now the greater need in service learning is not to prove the need for or efficacy of service learning but to turn the focus squarely back on practice Following established best practice is not enough instructors also need to reflect on how this fits within the specific context and application of each unique course and service learning partnership While there are many excellent resources that detail best practice and showcase exemplary service learning courses faculty reflection and course revision often goes unmentioned In response to the lack of attention on the role of reflection and course revision we convened groups of faculty from a variety of disciplines to reflect deeply on their courses paying specific attention to obstacles and challenges These conversations were converted to articles for this edited collection each chapter representing the process of reflection and revision and serving as a guide to develop effective practice in varied curricular contexts This text contributes to the body of literature on service learning in a unique and practical manner Faculty teaching or interested in teaching service learning classes would benefit from this text as well as university administrators and community service directors involved in service learning at a programmatic and institutional level This book should be marketed to faculty teaching disciplinary service learning classes and service learning pedagogy classes and administrative offices involved in service learning This could be a supplementary text for graduate level pedagogy courses Higher education institutional libraries would benefit from this text as well as the national and state campus compact offices
